The two story, single bay, semi-detached residence boasts a mansard front roof. The first story main facade and gallery are covered by vertical planking while the sides of the first story are horizontal board and batten. The open gallery surrounds the building on three sides. Its shed roof is supported by turned posts which are connected in front by vertical planking. The first story window is a double sash with mullion and transom, double hung, 2/2 construction. The second story windows differ in design, at right is a two sash with mullion and at left, a flat roofed oriel with a window only in the center portion. The gabled bay dormers have a single sash, double hung, 2/2 construction with a wide band separating the more narrow, 1/1 side windows. The sill of each has been extended with the addition of vertical planking.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This double, semi-detached residence is similar in design to a number of Waverly homes. The use of an open gallery, large first story windows, mansard front and gabled bay dormers however, give a sense of uniqueness to the barnlike structure. The building was most likely constructed as year-round dwelling considering its location and use as a double residence.
